Nick Rowe, a young West Point Lieutenant, was advising South Vietnamese strike troops for the Special Forces when he was captured by the NLF in the fall of 1963 and held prisoner in the South. This book describes his five year captivity in an intensely, if understandably, astigmatic way. He suffered considerably more than Richard Dudman in his shorter Forty Days With the Enemy (p. 404) and the ...

Colonel Rowe kept faith with the ideals of America even through his five years as a prisoner of war. He never let the enemy break his spirit, continuing to resist throughout his captivity and eventually escaping. He returned home with an even greater determination to advance the cause of freedom and democracy. He was pursuing that goal when the bullets of a cowardly assassin cut him down.
